Junior Analyst — Berlin

Berlin-based · Hybrid · Consultant engagement

City: Berlin; Starting date (earliest): At the earliest possible; Remuneration: competitive day-rate or monthly retainer

TasksThe Role

We are looking for a Junior Analyst to join our Berlin team, supporting our other Analysts, consultants and senior directors with research, written analysis and the day-to-day work of staying on top of German and EU political and policy developments.

External engagement is expected through Berlin's policy and foreign-affairs scene: representing the firm at seminars, workshops and think-tank events (DGAP, SWP, Körber-Stiftung, Hertie School, ECFR, MERICS, the political foundations and similar), engaging with stakeholders, and reporting back what they hear.

What You'll Do

- Monitor German and EU political, regulatory and policy developments, Bundestag, Bundesrat, federal ministries, Länder and the Brussels institutions, and surface what matters.
- Produce concise written outputs for the senior team: briefing notes, stakeholder profiles, weekly monitoring digests and short analytical pieces, in German and English.
- Conduct desk research on companies, individuals, policy files and market dynamics relevant to ongoing mandates.
- Build and maintain stakeholder maps, officials, parliamentarians, advisers, journalists, thirdparty voices.
- Attend think-tank events, seminars and workshops in Berlin on the firm's behalf, engage with stakeholders, and report back useful intelligence and context to the team.
- Provide reliable in-office presence on days when senior directors are working remotely, keeping the office staffed and the team's logistics moving.

Requirements

What We're Looking For

- A degree in International Relations, Political Science, Public Relations, Public Policy, Communications or an equivalent discipline.
- At least two years of relevant post-graduate work experience, in a consultancy, public affairs agency, think tank, political office, ministry, embassy, journalism, or in-house government relations role.
- Full professional fluency in German and English, written and verbal. You will draft in both languages.
- A solid working knowledge of the German political system and how decisions are made in Berlin and Brussels.
- Comfort in a small team where ownership and initiative are expected from day one.

What we offer

Working Arrangement

- Hybrid, with the expectation of being in the office on days when senior directors are working remotely.
- Engaged on an independent consultant basis (freiberuflich / selbständig), invoicing the firm for your services. You handle your own tax, social security and health insurance arrangements; we are happy to discuss the practicalities with shortlisted candidates.
- Berlin residency required, this is not a remote role, and regular presence at events across the city is part of the work.
- Fees: a competitive day-rate or monthly retainer, commensurate with experience.

Application

Please send a CV (in English or German) and a short covering note (no more than one page) explaining why this role interests you and what you would bring to the team. Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis until the position is filled - joshua.heames@danubiagroup.com.
